THE PHILANDERING HUSBAND

By DOROTHY DIX, The World's Highest Paid Woman Writer

I have a great many pathetic letters from women who tell me that their husbands are paying attention to other women, and who ask me what they shall do about it. I wish that there was something I could say to comfort these poor soul-tortured wives but there is no panacea for hurt love and outraged pride and dignity, nor is there any magic by which a wife can conjure back a husband's roving fancy.

The only two courses open to a woman under such conditions are either to get a divorce, or to possess her soul in patience, and cultivate philosophy and there are difficulties and drawbacks in the way of either procedure. Nor can either one be guaranteed to ease the pain in her heart and fill the emptiness in her life.

Of course when a woman who has been a perfectly good wife to a man, who has adored him and borne him children, who has sacrificed, saved, and toiled for him, and who has had no aim nor aspiration since her wedding except just to help him and make him happy and comfortable, finds out that he is false to her, her first impulse is to rush to the divorce court.

But, alas, divorce is only a specific for the surface ills of matrimony. It only cures in mild cases, such as incompatibility of temper and uncontentedness and similar trifling troubles. When a woman does not really love

THESE WOMEN PLEAD FOR HUN

Dr. Anita Augsburg (above) is the German woman who addressed a plea to Jane Addams of America to use her influence for a modulation of armistice terms dictated by the allies declaring "famine and misery" would result in Germany from their enforcement. Gertrude Baesmer and Alice Salomon (below) signed the appeal to American women which asked that rolling stock be left to Germany for distribution of food. They appealed to mothers of America as mothers of Germany and directed the message to Mrs. Woodrow Wilson.

divorcing the philandering husband to double when there are children. Almost any kind of a home is better for children than no home. Almost any kind of a father is better than no father. As long as a household is kept together the children have advantages of education, and of getting a start in the world that very few mothers can give them single handed, and so I feel that a woman with children should endure almost anything rather than break up her home while her children are small.

Naturally, it is folly to tell a woman with a faithless husband that he is not worth grieving over, and that in losing him she has lost little. Love and jealousy are not amenable to reason, nor do women care for a man in proportion to his worth.

But it can be said for the comfort of these women that their husband's sin is often not nearly so black as it looks to them. Men and women love differently. They have different codes of loyalty. A woman is an individualist in love. She loves but one at a time, and sees no other man but the one she loves.

A man loves diffusely. Even when he has installed one woman in the citadel of his heart, a dozen fancies play about the door and he has eyes for every skirt that flutters across his path. A woman who is disloyal is false all the way through. A man's disloyalty is often only skin deep. Therefore, it is contradictory but true, that a man can really love his wife and esteem and admire her above all other women even while he is indulging in a flirtation with another woman.

And in the end he will come back to his wife if she has the patience to wait for his return, and especially if she has the wisdom and the fortitude to pretend to be blind, and to treat his philanderings as a joke, instead of making a tragedy of it.

There are many bonds that draw the husband surely back to his wife. One of these is the marriage tie. The mere fact that a man has picked out a woman from all the balance of the world for his wife, and especially if his name, that she is his, sets her apart from all other women and crowns her with a certain glory in his eyes and appeals to him as no other woman can.

Then time fights on the side of the wife. The man with a roving fancy keeps roving. He is no more true to a lady love than he is to his wife. In time he wears of every new face, and then he comes back, at last, to the one faithful soul who has had the courage to endure.

Whether the wandering husband is worth waiting for is for the individual woman to decide. But he will surely come home in the end.

HAVANA, Nov. 28.—Cuba's Thanksgiving day demonstration of friendship and respect for the American people and their army and navy was by far the greatest this island has ever witnessed. Gonzalez, Senora Menocal marched at the head of the Cuban Red Cross, of which she is president.

Portraits of President Wilson, William McKinley and Theodore Roosevelt were carried by various associations as were banners bearing these words:

"Wilson, Cubans bless you!" "We don't forget what you did for us!" "Honor to Wilson, Paladins of liberty and right!" "Salutations to the American people and its glorious army and navy."

Upward of sixty thousand persons, including thirty-four bands, took part in the parade.

Blackheads are a confession

Blackheads are a confession that you are using the wrong method of cleansing for your type of skin.

Try the treatment given here and see how easily you can keep your skin free from this disfiguring trouble.

Apply hot wet cloths to the face until the skin is reddened. Then with a rough wash cloth, work up a heavy lather of Woodbury's Facial Soap and rub it into the pores thoroughly—always with an upward and outward motion. Rinse with clear, hot water, then with cold—the colder the better. If possible, rub your face for thirty seconds with a lump of ice. Dry the skin carefully.

Do not expect to get the desired results by using this treatment for a time and then neglecting it. But make it a daily habit and it will give you the clear, attractive skin that the steady use of Woodbury's always brings.

To remove blackheads already formed, substitute a flesh brush for the wash cloth in the treatment above. Then protect the fingers with a handkerchief and press out the blackheads. Thereafter, use Woodbury's Facial Soap in your daily toilet.

BLOCKADE MUST REMAIN IN FORCE TO CONTROL HUNS

LONDON, Nov. 28.—The Times says the absurd story which the Germans are reported to have spread semi-officially that the entente probably will consider to abolition of the blockade is absolutely unfounded. The allies have not the slightest intention, the Times continues, of throwing aside their chief weapon for insuring the signature of a just peace and the performance of its conditions, particularly in the present chaotic state of Germany.

After quoting evidence in an endeavor to refute Dr. Sol's declaration that Germany is starving, the newspaper says that German statements on this subject require careful examination. When the truth has been ascertained, the allies and the United States will allow the Germans from time to time during the peace negotiations, such food supplies and humanity dictates, but the blockade must remain in force until a definitive peace has been ratified. Thereafter it may be kept in abeyance as the chosen instrument of the league of nations for enforcing its decisions.

Concerning the German attempts to draw a distinction between the allies and the United States, the Times speaks of the futility of these efforts. With regard to President Wilson's coming visit to Europe, the Times says the allies look upon this unprecedented event as a great landmark in the world's history. The rejoice that the president is to make the visit first, because they desire to show the United States by the reception they give the chief executive their sense of the immense debt they owe for America's assistance, and, second, because they are anxious to have the personal aid of President Wilson in the task before them.
